CHAIRS OF JOURNALISM.

The matter of establishing Chairs of Journalism in the colleges is again re- vived, and it is now insisted that one shall be maintained in all the leading Universi- ties. If it is done the result will be disappointing. A man of good abilities will learn more of the duties and responsibilities of journalism in a practical newspaper office in one year, than in a college in ten years. Indeed the essential things cannot be communicated in any educational institution. Journalists are born, not made. That peculiar, unexplainable observant faculty, that adaptability to quick and correct methods of work, that natural resources that supplies every emergency with a remedy for its ills, the capacity to foresee, the ability to discriminate what is and what is not news, can never be taught in colleges or any- where else outside of a newspaper office, and much of it cannot be there acquired.

A liberal education is most desirable in any profession, but a man may write textbooks about journalism until he is gray, and lecture to classes for a life-time on the subject, and not one of his pupils will be able to get up a presentable local page, or to answer to the demands of a city office for a day's news, condensed and presented in readable shape. And as to making editors of hand, that is equally absurd. Nothing short of years of experience will do that which the friends of the new system hope to accomplish in schools. But we are told that the study will be exemplified by practical work upon papers published by the class. There again resides a fallacy, for no amateur paper is fit for school, it is the worst school imaginable, and much of it cannot be there acquired.

A liberal education is most desirable in any profession, but a man may write textbooks about journalism until he is gray, and lecture to classes for a life-time on the subject, and not one of his pupils will be able to get up a presentable local page, or to answer to the demands of a city office for a day's news, condensed and presented in readable shape. And as to making editors of hand, that is equally absurd. Nothing short of years of experience will do that which the friends of the new system hope to accomplish in schools. But we are told that the study outside of the office. But we are willing to admit that there is more probability of that class being prepared than of any other connected with a journal, for in his case he can be under practical instruction with other journals before him, and telegraphic sheets perhaps for study; but we would give more for the practical man who has learned what constituted news quality in a practical office in one year of hard knocks and all-night work than for a college-bred news editor of two or three or even five years theoretical experience. The one and overshadowing reason that remains why chairs of journalism will not answer the purpose for which designed, is that they never teach the pupil what not to say. He may in school learn much directly connected with the work of a man whose M's goes to print, but beyond that we do not believe that institutes can fit men for practical journalism as can a good course of reading, practical work in an office, and the mastership of a shrewd and experienced publisher and a corps of experienced editors.

LESSING TELEGRAPHERS' LABORS.

The telegraphers of the country are a hard-working body of men. Their vocation is one of the most trying character. It tests physical capacity to the utmost.

This class of men never have been overpaid by the corporations employing them—indeed they are paid less than the men are taken into consideration, their pay has in the main, been inadequate and their tasks exceedingly heavy. The people will therefore be gratified to learn that the employes have succeeded in securing from their employers better terms, so far as hours of labor are concerned. How far the strike of Chinese railway laborers at Seeding still continues.

Six young Indian girls from Dakota were com- mitted at the Cathedral of Holy Name in Chicago Wednesday.

We bid adieu to Pern in the 4th instant seventy-five Mordmores to the boat.

PEASANT OF JOURNALISM?

If it were not so serious a matter in the sense of being an effort to subvert governmental methods prescribed by the people in the Constitution, the trimming of the Democratic State Central Committee on the railroad question would be ludicrous. Who has given that political body the power to speak for the people of this State? By what right does it cite State officials before it to account for the discharge of their duty under the law? Whence comes the authority to dictate, through the medium of resolutions of censure, what a given State department shall do? Really the record of the fact that the three Railroad Commissioners went before a political body and explained what they had done, were doing and intended to do, is shameful and must cause citizens who have some regard for the law to blush for the decadence of those institutions erected to secure men in their rights.

It is humiliating to reflect that the irresponsible committee of a political party has the effrontry to dictate to the people through their elected officers. It is very true that the committee was divided in opinion as to whether the Railroad Commissioners should be left alone, hanged, quartered or burned at stake; but the mere fact that a secret political meeting was held by a party to consider either side or not it should threaten and menace our officers of the law, is enough to alarm thoughtful citizens and cause them to seriously inquire whether the people or the politicians own the country and all that therein is?

PALESTINE REPUBLICANS.

Contrary to the hopes and expectations of the Democrats of that State, the Re- publican Convention held Wednesday in Pennsylvania proved that the party it represents is in perfect harmony in all its parts. Pennsylvania Republicans have buried past differences, and all await for the advancement of the party. The most prominent feature in the platform is the declaration in favor of a protective tariff. It was precisely what was expected from that section of the country, and emphasizes the position heretofore taken by the party that should be inserted in a national platform no tariff plank. It is proper enough for the States to declare as to what they want, but the mere fact that a secret political meeting was held by a party to consider either side or not it should threaten and menace our officers of the law, is enough to alarm thoughtful citizens and cause them to seriously inquire whether the people or the politicians own the country and all that therein is?

DAILY WEATHER REPORT.

UNITED STATES SIGNAL OFFICE,
SACRAMENTO, July 13, 1883

HURTADO AND RATER

TO BE HANGED ON THURSDAY, AUGUST THIRTIETH.

Crowded Court-room—Both Murderers Address the Court—Full Text or Hurtado's Remarks.

Yesterday morning, long before 10 o'clock, the room of Department One of the Superior Court was crowded by people anxious to hear Judge Armstrong fix the day for executing the condemned murderers—Joseph Hurtado and Simon Rater.

At exactly 10 A. M., Judge Armstrong took the bench and the Court was called to order. Hurtado had been previously brought into the room by the Sheriff, and was seated before Mr. Hart and Mr. Jones, his counsel. The prisoner looked as though he had passed a sleepless night.

TO DISCHARGE THIS LOAD FROM MY HEART.

The Court said he had considered the legal reasons advanced by counsel why the day should not be fixed for carrying the judgment into execution. He was of the opinion that the verdict of the jury goes to the full extent of the law, and that prosecution by information is "a process of law." He stated that the Supreme Court of this and several other States had decided these points, and that the State of California, in its opinion of the United States, also advised that a State could do away with a jury trial. The motion was too late, and the Court thought the points were not new or important, and therefore the motion was overruled.

Counsel excepted to the ruling on each point, and then asked that the day of execution be fixed as soon as possible.

He said that an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court, and in the event that the day was set far enough off the matter might be decided by the Supreme Court before the day of execution arrived.

The Court held that he could not wait longer than sixty days. Mr. Jones then stated that the prisoner wished to speak himself.

I AM A CONDEMNED MURDERER.

I have the cloak of a murderer over me. I am told that the Court would grant me all the time he wished, as he had a great deal to say. The Court replied that a reasonable time would be allowed. The prisoner was forced to sit, and from time to time, his language was forced to be more forcible, with much feeling. Sometimes he was quite eloquent, at others so pathetic as to bring tears to the eyes of many a stricken man, and when he spoke in English he was unable to wipe away a tear or get a breath.

Pacing his cell, he pulled his hair from his left eye, and with the fingers of his right hand took from its socket and placed on the chair beside the wall a glass eye. As unconsciously as a child, he placed it in his right eye, and two inches, with both hands took from his mouth an entire set of false teeth, which were also placed beside the other false teeth.

Placing one of his fingers cut together, he gave the Judge a cut-and-glance, and motioned for him to proceed with his sentence.

An old man, if you think you have dissected yourself sufficiently we will go on.

The judgment of this Court is that I speak is not of the English language which I am very sure, but I find it almost impossible to make myself properly understood, so that I will speak in Spanish.

Jeremiah Hampton, stand up. I am surprised that a strong, healthy, robust young man, with such rosy cheeks and a Websterian bow, covered with such early raven locks, should plead guilty in this Court to a charge of drunkenness. Why, sir, if you commence on this downward road to ruin in your youth, where do you expect to bring up in after years? Young man, you do not seem to have profited by the example of the thousands who have been ruined by intemperance. I will tell you, if you listen to me, but you must be careful in what you hear; you may never appear in this Court on a similar charge. The judgment of this Court is that the defendant, Jeremiah Hampton, be fined in sum of thirty dollars.

"Hold on, your Honor; will you allow me?"

"If you have anything to say why judgment should not be pronounced, speak out."

The defendant raised his head, and then laid his raven locks thereon, deposited the wig on the chair beside him, leaving exposed a pale completely bald and covered head.

Placing his left hand on his chest, and his right hand on the chair beside the wall, a glass eye.

As unconsciously as a child, he placed it in his right eye, and two inches, with both hands took from his mouth an entire set of false teeth, which were also placed beside the other false teeth.

Placing one of his fingers cut together, he gave the Judge a cut-and-glance, and motioned for him to proceed with his sentence.

"Hold on, Judge; I thought I was to get butch."

"No old hand-held, one-eyed, toothless drunk like you can create sympathy in the Court by diabolizing. Mr. Clerk, enter the judgment."

AS ADVERTISING SCHEME.—To those who visit the Capitol frequently the words, "Read the Daily Examiner," painted on a pine board which is erected on the side of the driveway near the north end of the building, have no special significance. Strangers, however, it is said, after reading it, frequently stop to inquire about the paper, or if it is mentioned, of subscribing for the paper. It is understood that recently an advertising agent of the German remedy was advertising through the press for "Mashed Root-stew" will be illustrated by life-size portraits, showing "before and after taking," placed at regular intervals throughout the ground.

FALCHID'S TROUBLES.—E. Falchid, who was to have been tried in the Police Court yesterday upon a charge of misdemeanor, sworn to by the Health Officer, pleaded guilty. His sentence was deferred for two weeks to allow him time to abate the nuisance complained of. The Health Officer has exacted from him a promise to leave the place where all parties who have been violating the health ordinances. Since he came into office—less than one month, he has served over 200 notices, and the fine is about $1000, which he has been busy cleaning up and abating nuisances. The officer means business, and those who fail to obey his orders are taken before the police court. The Falchid's house and property has always been an eye-sore and disease-breeding locality, and the Health Officer deserves the thanks of the community for his endeavours to secure the abatement of the nuisance.

THE BLACK FLAG.—This evening, at the Metropolitan Theater, "The Black Flag" will be produced by Edwin F. Thorne and company. The play was a complete success at the Bush Street Theater, San Fran. For five weeks it has been presented on the San Francisco public from the boards of the Bush Street Theater and to a splendid audience. The company is new in this city, but from what can be learned are worthy of patronage. The name of "Mashed Root-stew" will be illustrated by life-size portraits, showing "before and after taking," placed at regular intervals throughout the ground.
